

Strategy + Execution

A virtual marcom manager who does the heavy lifting while you grow your association.

“While marketing and communications is often the first department to be culled when times are tough, it’s actually the lifeboat that saves the passengers, so long as you’re good at it.” - Shaun Weston

As we all know, the association operations landscape has drastically changed in the last 12 months. The ability to adapt has been critical for the survival and continued growth of successful organizations. As an industry, we’ve seen small staff associations take on more duties than ever, with team members wearing even more hats than they did just two years ago as they try to maintain “business as usual.” As associations try to ride out the tough times while reducing or containing costs, marcom efforts are often cut, significantly reduced, or absorbed. Yet progressive boards still require their organizations to maintain and establish an industry presence, including a focus on public relations, social media, and thought leadership. For many associations, it may be more cost-effective to outsource marcom efforts than hiring a full-time team member. That’s where we come in.
